JOHN CHURCH, Jr.,

Thursday,

ond night this season of the beautiful ball-tisoment, called

New York Beening Fost, there has resided at Rome, generally in the palace of the Spanish Embassador, in the Piazza d'Espagna, a portly lady, not young, but still very handsome, with a keen black eye, and a grace and elegance of manner which even her somewhat unwieldy degree of corpuleace can not dispel. She is a personal friend of Pius IX, a faithful and devoted daughter of the Church, scrupulously exact in her attendance on the ceremonial festivities of the Catholic Church, and withal as shrewd a railway financier as any of the Wall-street men who dabble in Eric, Central and Michigan Southern. She owns most of the Spanish railroads, and is altogether a most remarkable lady.

By birth a Neapolitan Princess, she becam some thirty-five years ago the fourth wife of Ferdinand VII, King of Spain, and since there in 1713, there was every prospect that the the crown, on the death of Ferdinand, would rightfully revert to his brother, Carlos. To avoid this, the Queen prevailed upon her hus-band to make a special will, bequeathing the crown of Spain to their eldest daughter, is-for what cause does not appear—and Ortege thought he could reinstate the heir, who according to the Salio law, is really entitled to the crown of Spain. He induced the Hamboldt's Private Opinion of Distin-gulahed Personages—The Parentage of Louis Napoleon and Count Morney Deter-

Leafe Napeleen and Count Morney Determined.

Humboldt, in his private correspondence, does not disguise his opinions of the crowned heads of Europe, and, among others, of Louis Napoleon. On the 29th of January, 1852, Varnhagen's journal reads as follows: "Humboldt came at one o'clock, wonderfully robust for his time of life! Speaks with indignant scorn of the coup d'etat in France, the undisguised outrage, the arbitrary banishments, and particularly the robbery of the estates of the Orieans family. The King was at first full of rejoicing—he and the Court saw nothing offensive in the crime committed against the people, the legislature, the law, and the sanctity of oaths—but that the adventurer preserves universal suffrage, rests upon the people, practices socialism, and even wants to be Emperor, this is what makes him detested. Humboldt is of opinion that in the revolution of February the establishment of the provisional government, which was immediately obeyed throughout France, was a piece of even greater andacity than the present usurpation of the one man who has already been President and worn the name of government for three years. I reminded him of the nariament, and the committee of fifty of the provision of the present usurpation of the one man who has already been President and worn the name of government for three years.

ready been President and worn the name of government for three years. I reminded him of the parliament, and the committees of fifty at Frankfort-on-the-Main. In the disposition to acquiesce he sees that national feeling of unity and cohesion, which, among Frenchmen, suppresses all party feeling. Humboldt says there is no doubt that Louis Bonaparte is a son of Admiral Verhuel, and his brother, Morney, a son of General Flahault, who, he says, lived with both the sisters, the Queen of Holland and the Queen of Naples. Of Persigny—Fialin de Persigny—he speaks with the utmost contempt, calling him a raw, unkempt, non-commissioned officer, who still arrogates to himself discoveries about the pyramids.

Singular and Interesting Procession at A private letter, of late date, from Naples SAVS:

A most curious and interesting procession has been seen here. For the first time, I believe, since 1848, the Court sallied forth in state to visit the churches. The young Queen was in full dress, with a large train of black velvet, and a dress covered with black lace, and wearing on her head the Spanish mantilla. She walked by the side of his Majesty, preceded by the chief officers attached to the Royal service weitlings and military all in preceded by the chief officers attached to the Royal service, civilians and military, all in full costume; a large display of the body guard, and uniforms of every fashion; the gay pages in their Spanish attire, and all the ladies of the Court following, in close attend-ance, with their black velvet trains, in honor of the day, but with colored ribbons or flow-of the day, but with colored ribbons or flowers in their hair, in order to mark the absence of Court mourning. It really was a gorgeous sight.

The cortege issued from the Palace on the square, followed by a certain number of old-fashioned sedan chairs, which were carried in reserve for the Queen and Princesses in case of fatigue. The whole procession, describing a semi-circular curve, moved along one side of the square up to the Church of San Ferdinando, where the people subsequently had a sight of the decoration of the chief altarpiece. It was a transparent painting, a altarpiece. It was a transparent painting, a copy of Raphael's magnificent "Transfiguration," very well lighted up from behind, and producing a fine effect.

There was, of course, a large concourse of peop'e on the Place, but not half so many as one might have expected on such an occasion. There was not one cheer, nor did the bystanders take off their hats as the Royal cortege passed, with the exception of the occupants of some of the balconies. The Royal pair looked sad enough; it might have been in honor of the day, but the news from Sicily that morning was surely of a nature sufficiently depressing. ciently depressing.

HUMBOLDT'S OPINION OF THE UNITED STATES AND THE AMERICAN DEMOCRACY .- Humboldt, in his private letters, just published, is severe upon the United States, which he ragarded as having betrayed the cause of freedom in arisen a great love for me, but the whole there presents to my mind the sad spectacle of liberty reduced to a mere mechanism in the element of utility, exercising little ennobling or elevating influence upon mind and soul, which, after all, should be the aim of political liberty. Hence indifference on and soul, which, after all, should be the aim of political liberty. Hence indifference on the subject of slavery. But the United States are a Cartesian vortex, carrying everything with them, grading everything to the level of monotony.

Again, speaking of the success of the Democrats in 1856, he remarks:

And the disgraceful party which sells negro children, and distributes canes of honor, as the Russian Emperor does swords of honor, and Gracfe's noses of honor—who would prove that all white workmen should rather be slaves than free—have succeeded. What a crime!

A GAY MARRIAGE IN SYRIA.—A gay marriage recently took place at Beirut, in Syria. The parties were the American Vice-Consul at Beirut, Dr. R. G. Barclay, of Virginia, and Miss Louisa Hampton, the niece of H. B. M.'s Consul at Jerusalem. After the wedding ceremony, the bridal party, including the officers of a British man-of-war, mounted themselves upon gaily-caparisoned Arabian steeds, and, preceded by the bride in a sedan chair, went to a hotel for the breakfast. The flags of England and America were festooned about the hall, and the wedding cake, a monster, four feet in hight, was similarly decorated in miniature. After breakfast there were speeches, of course, and it is unnecessary to say that the Americans were well forward in the oratorial van.

A COMPREHENSIVE SPIRITUAL SPECULATION A companies stress of Andrew Jackson Davis's new paper proposes to enter into a comprehensive speculation with any one who desires to furnish houses to the public at a cheap rate, to make boots and shoes for the popular lace at a nominal cost, to cut out garments and sell them, or do anything else that the world stands in need of; the enterprise to be a purely benevolent one, with no thought of pecuniary returns attached to it. The philanthropic will please take notice, and govern themselves accordingly. The "spirits" have indorsed the scheme, and the world is to be the scheme, and the world is to be

QUEEN VICTORIA OPPOSED TO AN ORIGINAL PORTRAIT.—The American Association in London recently desired to have an original portrait of the Queen, painted by Minor H. Kellogg, a Cincinnati artist. An application being made through Mr. Dallas, Col. C. B. Phipps replied for her Majesty, that she appreciates the sentiment prompting the request, but that she can not give sittings for an original portrait. She will be happy, however, to give every facility for taking a copy of such picture as may be most satisfactory to the Association. OUREN VICTORIA OPPOSED TO AN ORIGINAL

A NERVOUS HERCULES.—It seems clear that muscle alone doesn't make the man. Dr. Winship, "the strongest man," who can lift 1,100 pounds, is painfully bashful and timid before an audience, although within the past six months he has appeared in public at least eighty times. He is conscious of his nervous peculiarity, but cannot explain or conquer it.

Railway in London.

The London illustrated News, of late date, contains a description of the tunnel now being built under the streets of London, for the ing built under the streets of London, for the purpose of connecting the city with the series of railways at the north of the Thames. To have a railway after the American fashion, passing through a densely populous district, and crossing on a level and over-crowded thoroughfare, was considered out of the question. Therefore, the plan was resorted to of avoiding the surface altogether, leaving that to the ordinary local traffic and travel, and going entirely under the city with all the passenger and freight trains. The London railroad tunnel was constructed by making an owen cut from the surface of the London railroad tunnel was constructed by making an open cut from the surface of the street down the distance required, building the archway, and then replacing the surface—a cheaper mode than tunnelling. The work has been contracted for and is now in progress, the company engaged in it having a capital of four millions two hundred and tifty thousand dollars, in shares of fifty dollars each. To avoid any annoyance from smoke or the combustion of fuel in the tunnel, the traffic is to be worked by light locomotives of a novel and ingenious construcmotives of a novel and ingenious construc-tion. They have no fire-box, but will be charged with hot water and steam at a cer-tain pressure, to be supplied by fixed boilers at the termini, and will be furnished with a arge heater to assist in maintaining the re-quired temperature. It is believed that each ocomotive can be supplied with power suffi-ient to run the whole tunnel distance. The unnel is expected to be finished and in work-ng order by 1862. This plan is evidently be best one which can be devised for passing over the space occupied by crowded cities. It will ultimately have to be resorted to wherever practicable by all roads which require the crossing of such spaces, no matter what the cost may be.

"Of the portraits of Washington, the most of them give to his person a fulness that it did not possess, together with an abdominal did not possess, together with an abdominal enlargement greater than in the life, while his matchless limbs have in but two instances been faithfully portrayed—in the equestrian portrait by Trumbull, of 1790, a copy of which is in the City Hall of New York, and in an engraving by Loisler, from a painting by Cogniet, French artists of distinguished merit. The latter is not an original painting, the head being from Stuart, but the delineation of the limbs is the most perfect extant."

A writer in the New York Feening Park A writer in the New York Eccning Post.

after copying the above paragraph, observes: About fifty years ago the writer of this, the grandson of an officer of the revolution, called to pay his respects to that gallant and patriotic old soldier, Colonel Benjamin Tallmadge, of Litchfield, who was one of Washparticle oid soldier, Colonel Benjamin talmadge, of Litchfield, who was one of Washington's aids during most of the war. Of course, the conversation very naturally turned upon the scenes and events of those trying days, Valley Forge, Andre's execution and the like. Colonel Trumbull's portrait of the Chief being mentioned, Tallmadge said, laughingly, that the legs in that picture were painted from his. He said that the demands of the service made it very inconvenient for General Washington to give as much time in sitting as the painter required, that it was frequently remarked how much his legs were like those of the General, that Trumbull pronounced them an exact pattern, and so, with Washington's consent he served as a substitute, and thus the artist was able to take all the time he needed to perfect that part of the portrait, which has always been greatly admired.

GRAND EXHIBITION OF BEARS IN NEW YORK. A private exhibition of Adams's Menagerie was given the other evening in New York. The collection of bears is very fine, surpassing by far any ever before exhibited in that city. by far any ever before exhibited in that city. There are about thirty of them, and a dozen were showed in the ring, where they growled and rolled about, as if desirous of breaking the chains which bound them to the floor. The old hunter has given them all names, and seems particularly fond of "Lady Washington," a huge grizzly, which carried his pack among the Rocky Mountains for three years. "Col. Fremont," is another huge animal. Then there is "Jenny Lind," a doctic beast, and "Gen. Arnold." who is pronounced as treacherous as was the soldier from whom it takes its name. One shaggy fellow climbed a tree, and took a seat in a large arm chair on the top of it, while another danced when bid-den, with the grace, we had almost said, of a ballet girl.

Progress of Free Thought.—A number of free-thinkers, who inhabit the little village of Williams Centre, in this State, have opened a "Free Hall," wherein all classes and conditions of men are welcome to utter such heresies as they please. A Lyceum has also been started at De Rupter, in New York, for a similar purpose. The reformatory press is not so slow in recognizing the advantages which accrue to the "cause of progress," from the opening of these places. Reform speakers are about to take possession of the new halls, triumphing in the large liberty they enjoy, and apparently careless of consequences. PROGRESS OF FREE THOUGHT .- A number of

AN UNAPPRECIATED COMPLIMENT.-In East Boston, a day or two since, a ship-builder named a handsome new vessel the Edward Exercit, and the original owner of that cogno-men was invited to the feast that followed the launch. At the super table, Mr. Everett was toasted as "the littest candidate for the next President of the United States:" a sennext President of the United States;" a sen-timent which the distinguished gentleman seems to have regarded as anything but a compliment, for he immediately responded that he did not expect that "from his friends." He will probably be better satisfied when he receives the same compliment from

A SLANDERER COWHIDED BY A WOMAN. The "head of a numerous family" was un-mercifully cowhided by a respectable woman in Jeffersonville, Indiana, a day or two since. He had circulated a vile slander on the lady, who is of good repute, and known to possess all the qualities that entitle her to respect. She followed him in his retreat from the lash, and every blow she gave told plainly that there was virtue in the whip if there was

A WOMAN LOSES HER FINGER THROUGH SU A WOMAN LOSES HER FINGER LIMBOUGH SU-PERSYSTION.—A poor German woman, living in Newark, N. J., who had been suffering great pain for several weeks past from the effects of a sore finger, caused by a brass ring which she had worn, recently had her finger amputated to save her life, as mortification had set in. The woman wore the ring through superstitious motives, and manifested more uneasiness in parting with the ring than with the finger.

A BOVINE TRICK BY STUDENTS,-So A Bowns Trick by Students.—Some of the young gentlemen of the Troy (N. Y.) University have been playing a bowine trick upon the faculty. They fastened a cow by the horns to the horns of the altar, with her offspring by her side. The faculty, however, have not yet discovered the peculiar fun of the proceeding, and incline to regard it in a serious light. Apology or explanation are the only alternatives offered to the delin-onents.

PRICE ONE CENT. A Female Spanish Intriguer The Cause of General Ortegn's Execution.

The New Jersey Wife Marder Particulars of the Sentence of Rev. J. S. Harden. A Female Spanish Intriguer—The Cause of General Ortegra. Execution.

The last news from Europe included an item stating that General Ortegra, having been duly sentenced, was shot at Madrid on the 18th of April, for conspiracy against the crown of Spain. The incidents which led to his death are interesting as being one of the expiring efforts of the Carlists to revive those claims which involved the Spanish Peninsula in a disastrons and bloody war.

For the last ten or twelve years, says the New York Beening Post, there has resided at Rome, generally in the palace of the Spanish The telegraph has already announced the entence of Rev. J. S. Harden, for the murder of his wife, by poison, and Friday's New York Times gives the particulars in a lette dated Belvidere, Thursday, May 3:

Court opened at 10 o'clock, the room being filled. The Court ordered the prisoner to be set at the bar. He came in leaning on the arm of the Sheriff, pale and haggard in appearance. Upon calling his name, he stood up, without assistance, to hear the sentence of the Court, which is as follows:

Jacob S. Harden, I am about to proceed to the discharge of the most solemn duty which a mortal man can be called to perform. This trial, which for the last two weeks has been the object of so much interest, is closed. trial, which for the last two weeks has been the object of so much interest, is closed. The humane maxim of the law that you were to be considered innocent until you were proven guilty, no longer applies to you. A jury of your courts, selected by yourself, of unprejudiced, intelligent, conscientious men, after a full investigation of your case in all its length and breadth, after hearing all the recomments of your course, oversead upon its length and breadth, after hearing all the arguments of your counsel, pressed upon them with untiring energy, with an eloquence rarely equaled, with a pathos which drew tears from the stoutest heart, and with a force and power which could not have failed to break the chain of the evidence of your guilt, had it have been of adamanting strength, have proved that that there was no doubt of your guilt, that the evidence could only the fail of the evidence could of your guilt, that the evidence could only the fail of the evidence could only the evidence could only the evidence could only the evidence of the evidence could only the evidence that the evidence of the evidenc toubt of your guilt, that the evidence could not be true, and you be guiltless of the agony and blood of your wife, that she was foully nurdered by you in a manner almost too

With the verdict of that jury, it is almost needless to say, this Court is entirely satisfied It could have been no other without a disre-It could have been no other without a disregard of the duties which they owe to the society of which they are members, without disregarding their oaths. If human testimony can demonstrate the perpetration of a murder, it has demonstrated that you are the perpetrator of this. Have, you anything to say why sentence of death should not be pronounced against you? If you have, now the time to say.

The Court here paused for an answer. The rise the time to say it.

The Court here paused for an answer. The prisoner deliberately raised his hand and said:

'I have nothing to say on that subject. I refer you to my counsel." Mr. Shipman arose n his place and said :

'I have nothing to say, may it please your The Judge resumed: "It remains for me The Judge resumed: "It remains for me to procounce the sentence of the Court, which is hereby by the Court considered and adjudged, that you, Jacob S. Harden, for the felony and murder in the first degree of Hannah Louise Harden, of which you have been convicted, in manner and form as charged in the indictment, be taken to the jail of this County of Warren, whence you have been brought, and there safely kept until Thursday, the 28th day of June next, and that on that day, between the hours of 10 o'clock in the forenoon and 3 o clock in the afternoon, within the prison of the County of Warren, within the prison of the County of Warren, where you shall be confined, or in an inclosed yard of said prison, or within an inclosure crected for that purpose adjoining such prison, at the discretion of the Sheriff, you be hung by the neck until you be dead, and may God have mercy on your son!"

have mercy on your soul."

After the sentence was concluded, the prisoner sat down and wept. His counsel also, and many others were bathed in tears.

The reporter of the New York Herald says, the conviction of Rev. Mr. Harden, for the mprder of his wife at Belvidere, New Jersey, caused the greatest excitement. The blow will andoubtedly kill his mother, who is now very ill. The popular feeling is with the jury. They were unanimous and stayed out as a matter of form. Harden is almost deranged with grief.

A Half-Executed Highway nau-The Sensa-

One would naturally suppose that a man who had suffered all the horrors of hanging just short of actual death, would never risk the gallows again; but such, in one case at least, was not the result. A house-breaker named Smith was hanged at Tyburn, December 24, 1705, and when he had hung nearly fifteen minutes, the people shouted "a reprieve!" He was cut down—bled, and he recovered!

reprieve!" He was cut down—bled, and he recovered!

When asked what his feelings had been, he replied in substance that "when he was turned off, he for some moments was sensible of very great pain, occasioned by the weight of his body, and felt his spirits in a strange commotion, violently pressing upwards; that having forced their way to his head, he, as it were, saw a great blaze or glaring light, which seemed to go out of the eyes with a fissh, and then he lost all sense of pain; that after he was cut down, and began to come to himself, the blood and spirits forcing themselves into their former channels, put him, by a sort of pricking or shooting, to such intolerable pain that he could have wished those hanged who had cut him down."

Ever afterward he went by the name of balf-hanged Smith. This fellow soon results and fifty and one-half votes. "One hundred and fifty and one-half, votes. "One hundred and fifty and one-half votes. Ever afterward he went by the name of half-hanged Smith. This fellow soon returned to his former evil habits, and was again tried at the Old Bailey for house-breaking; but the jury brought in a special ver-dict, leaving the affair to the decision of the twelve judges, who decided in favor of the prisoner. Even this second wonderful escape prisoner. Even this second wonderful escape did not deter him from resuming his mal-practices, and the third time he was to have been brought to trial, but the prosecutor died before the day appointed, and thus he once more got free. Nothing is known of his subsequent history.

Douglas Killed by Forney's Advocacy. A Washington correspondent has the following: "Some of the doughface Democrats say that Forney has killed Douglas; that if it had not been for his friendship, the South would have shaken hands and made up with him at Charleston. It is unquestionably true that the fact that Forney, Hickman, Haskin and others have acted the past winter with the Republicans, has had a great effect in all the slave States against Douglas, but it mast be remembered that without these men and the class of Democrats they represent Mr. Doug-DOUGLAS KILLED BY FORNEY'S ADVOCACY. remembered that without these men and the class of Democrats they represent, Mr. Douglas had not the chance of a triumph in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, or even Illinois. If he had joined the Constitution newspaper in making war upon these gentlemen, he might perhaps have got the nomination, but he would have been the weakest candidate of all who have been ammed. Mr. Forens, it is who have been named. Mr. Forney, it is said, is very indignant at the conduct of the South at Charleston, and much disappointed at Douglas's failure to get the nomination at an early stage of the balloting.

In 1833 Ferdinand died, and Isabella, then only three years old, became Queen under the regency of her mother. Carlos, the brother, who by the Salic law was entitled to the succession, claimed his rights, and with his partisans, composed principally of the old aristocracy, prepared to enforce his claim.
The Queen Christina gathered around her the liberals, and, supported by England, successfully repelled the Carlist party, and after

WOMEN BETRAYED BY THE PROULLAR PRES-SURE OF THEIR HANDS.—Two French ladies, who were in San Francisco when the Japanese arrived there, were anxious to go on board the vessel where the foreigners were. But ladies could not be received. Nevertherless, they put on portions of their husbands's wardrobe and made the visit. They escaped detection while they only talked, for neither party could un-derstand each other; when, however, they shook hands with the Admiral, a peculiar smile passed over his features, and be imme-diately caused an attendant to dive into his cabin and bring out a variety of hair-pias, The Gladiator GAS-BURNING, SMOKE-CONSUMING
